

Author of the most downloaded book "Umjolo Masimba"

E[🍆]aculations & [🍑]rgasms AREN'T ENOUGH [💧]

When chemistry forges into Illusionary compatibility...

Njabulo Chriswell Sithole

EJACULATIONS & ORGASMS AREN'T ENOUGH

By

NJABULO CHRISWELL SITHOLE

EJACULATIONS & ORGASMS AREN'T ENOUGH

Copyright©2022 by Njabulo Chriswell Sithole

4652 Hector Street Ext 2, Mhluzi Middelburg 1050

Tel no: 068 586 1794 Chriswellnjabulo@gmail.com

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced by any means without the prior written permission of the publisher. Thank you for supporting the author's rights.

All quotations without reference original belong to the author.
All quoted authors have been accredited with exact reference.
Any error identified can be always rectified by notification.

Illustrated picture taken with permission from Canva

Outlined and designed by Zojoe communications

Printed by RED SPIRAL

ISBN 979-8-81-965117-9

Kingdom Kings

*Discovering divine identities.
Establishing compatible brotherhood.
Cultivating change everywhere.*

CONTENTS

Introduction	Pg. VII
Women in relationships.....	Pg.1
Cheating is a contentment issue	Pg. 5
Are you sure we are not related.....	Pg. 14
Types of relationships.....	Pg. 16
Chronicles of Lies	Pg. 19
Love-seeking single parents	Pg. 24
Respecting preferences	Pg. 27
The danger of habits	Pg. 31
Ex-lovers that won't rest.....	Pg. 34
Comparisons	Pg. 38
Familiarize yourself with what is ahead.....	Pg. 40
Money matters	Pg. 44
Background analysis.....	Pg. 50
Types of lovers.....	Pg. 52

Clash of family culture.....	Pg. 54
Deal-breakers.....	Pg. 68
Knowing your partner's vulnerabilities.....	Pg. 72
Women have traumas.....	Pg. 75
At what phase did you walk into his LIFE.....	Pg. 79
Communication.....	Pg. 81
Forgiveness is love's core.....	Pg. 83
Commitment requires contentment.....	Pg. 85
Violating a man's ego.....	Pg. 86
Crazy expectations	Pg. 89
Women need attention.....	Pg. 92
Conflict resolution.....	Pg. 95
Partnership.....	Pg. 101
The reality of suffering	Pg. 105
The two heads of a man.....	Pg. 107
Intentions vs nature.....	Pg. 109

Relationship beliefs.....	Pg. 112
Loving enough to let go.....	Pg. 114
Conflict of interest.....	Pg. 116
Poem.....	Pg. 118
Quotes.....	Pg. 121
Acknowledgements.....	Pg. 126

INTRODUCTION

Women exclaim how the guy hits the right spots and men perpetuate out of portion how high levelled the stove (referring to the warmth produced by a woman's vagina during intercourse) is without properly assessing each other's compatible capacity of building a healthy relationship.

Many women are “Dickmized” (obsessed with a guy's sexual performance) and only wake up to harsh consequences when the gentleman leaves her for a new target.

Lust likes you for what you have not necessarily for who you really are. Lust hates the reality of who you are so it converts you to a utensil that is at the mercy of the horniness of the other. Lust is self-serving.

It is incredibly thrilling and pleasurable to be young especially with the endless varieties one has in the opposite sex.

There is a constant obsession with eggplants and peaches that however leads to the ever-growing spread of fatherlessness. If ever ejaculations and orgasms were enough to build stable families and homes. We wouldn't be having the catastrophic effects not necessarily of unsafe sex but of self-compromise.

It is however very wrong for you to find someone to love but not someone to also lust while you love them. Lust alone is wrong because it will make you totally vulnerable to others that can love you. Love alone is also wrong because it will make you vulnerable to those you lust. The whole idea is loving whom you lust and lusting whom you love. Society makes looking for the above combination impossible to achieve as they continuously impose various beliefs on you as a young person.

You have to erotically view the person you love. If you are not looking at the person you love then you are probably looking somewhere else. Many men find themselves in a predicament of loving in one place and lusting in another.

Imagine the beauty of sleeping and waking up to one sexually satisfying person till death, in a lifetime commitment to each other.

Sex is over-exaggerated. Nothing is as commercialized as the illusion of sex being the hype of a relationship. It doesn't matter whether you wait 90 days, 6 months or 8 years to have sex. It is an old pleasure designed by God for marriage.

As a man you can impregnate a woman you lust and as a woman you can be impregnated by a man you lust. Lust unfortunately is not a foundation for love. Divorce and single parenting are always inevitable.

I have met a lot of married couples. Many are dissatisfied with their partners in many various aspects and are at the brink of divorce while a few are genuinely happy with each other. Why? These couples somewhere realized that it takes more than just satisfactory sex to get through life together.

Relationships that exist just for ejaculations and orgasms eventually die from dissatisfaction. Boys are fascinated by the sexual appeals that are stimulated by the figure of a woman's body while men are really fascinated with the essence within a woman's character. It is not the body that will be a wife to you or even be a mother to your children or even build you a home but it is the essence of her character that does all of the above. Truth is, we all start as boys.

Take a survey just around your community and you will realise that the epidemic of fatherlessness and single parenting is a harsh reality. It looks like our society is more like a sperm harvesting experiment.

Single parenting by any gender is not justified not even by the best of nature but somehow as humans we have adjusted to our dysfunction and somehow have embraced it.

Being young and open to such realities must evoke in you and me a desire to do relationship better and right to ourselves and to our future children.

Entering a relationship is life-changing yet it comes with various challenges that require both partners to develop character and to protect each other in places where vulnerabilities are evident. At some point you have to realize that you won't find a faultless partner but you can find a partner whose faults you can overlook perfectly. Good and great relationships are about holding equal ends of the satisfaction stick.

Sometimes being hated for telling someone the truth about where you stand with them instead of stringing them along is love itself.

There is a woman who inspires you to beat your drum and a woman who dances to the beating of your drum. One is in production and the other is in consumption. Blessed is he who finds a producer and a consumer in one woman. Patience reveals all characters. If you allow seasons of plenty to make you underestimate your partner with the mindset that you suddenly deserve better; you aren't a loving person, in fact you are materialistic, manipulative and narcissistic. Swallow that truth and work out your character. Real partnership and friendship comes to play when both your seasons interchange. Lack humbles you but plenty exposes you.

You must never come into a relationship to undermine, underestimate and ridicule your partner's career or passion instead find ways to teach and edify each other. Mutual submission is required here. The very same nectar from flowers that bees collect is pollinated by the same bees. Selfishness frustrates a relationship while selflessness enables it to flourish. You must always give back to what gives into you. Reciprocity is an outstanding pillar of compatibility.

The kind and quality of friends you chose while you were single will come into play and backfire differently when you get into a relationship. You will never be ashamed of good friends, a friend who is reliable, self-controlled, off integrity and mostly who fears God genuinely. Don't just befriend anyone. Evaluate the friends you have and need. Make sure you are built into honest circles of high quality friends as you can't really rely on your closest family members. Have rigid gatekeepers for your own courtesy. Bad friendships will clash with a good relationship and a bad relationship will clash with good friendships. The hold certain family members and friends have on your partner is dangerous for your well-being together.

Conflict resolution has a specific language. There is advice for different people. Be careful not to use just any advice on people. Advice varies based of the type of person one is. When you are dealing with a godly person, use godly advice. Using worldly advice to deal with a godly person will cause more harm than good and the opposite is also true. Talk to a person in the language they understand best.

Truth is, a man marries you long before the actual wedding. He shows it in his actions that you are the one. He chooses always to work things out with you regardless of being seen as a fool by others for doing so. He invests time, knowledge and wisdom into the relationship. He sacrifices for you and prizes your happiness. A man who keeps constant with his love decision and is eager to build a worthwhile relationship with you looks past sex. Sex becomes a benefit not the main focus.

We have so many beautiful yet broken women and so many handsome yet hurt men. What broke these women? What hurt these men? Failed and unmet expectations.

As partners we start a relationship with the intention to marry, to have a family and to die together; that alone is a worthwhile scenery that requires commitment, discipline and love from both parties.

We cannot shy away from the fact that we are all products of relationships. These primary people that we are products of, have some level of influence on how we view love and relationship. On a broader scale, society, our role models, religion and educational institutions play an active role in defining our relationships. Without doubt, we all want beautiful, secure and love-filled relationships. But, we cannot have them in our selfishness, ignorance, prideful and naturally destructive forms.

The person you are holistically, is what you bring into a relationship. Are you healthy or toxic?

Choose a partner in full awareness of your character, vision and mission. Be sure that you are also able to complement theirs. The partner that you choose will rub off on you everything they are. You are most vulnerable with the person you love.

The qualities you would like in a partner are the same qualities someone else may dislike in a partner. Someone once said, "When you date a person, you are going to find out why you found them single in the first place".

Mates selected and accepted out of lust, desperation, monetary gain, authoritative influences and peer pressure rather than careful judgment produce catastrophic results.

The criteria you create to qualify your ideal partner will either punish or reward you. Whatever red flags you ignore because of charm or beauty will catch up with you eventually. Compromising the criteria is compromising the quality of life you envision with your future spouse. Compromises backfire harshly. Better search and wait than to settle for misery.

It is important to introduce your prospective partner to the reality of yourself sooner than expected. Introduce him/her to your reality without the fear of him/her leaving you.

A man reasons before he feels. A woman feels before she reasons. If humility isn't present in either one of them, conflicts prolong and love suffers.

Familiarize yourself with their shortcomings, flaws and imperfections. Ask yourself whether you have the capacity to gracefully overlook those imperfections and clearly look into how they affect the quality of life you are building with God Almighty. Is your partner in partnership with God Almighty?

The biggest mistake we make is that we settle without exploration. Date the person long enough before you get into a relationship with them. Scrutinize their characters without favour and only settle for what you can gracefully handle. Why? Dating is an assessment stage. You don't only take the person home at their best but also at their worst and lowest. You take a person who is struggling with sin, who has shortcomings, who is still healing and most importantly who is striving in the same grace that has been apportioned to you.

There are three types of women/men:

1. The women/men of your specific criteria.
2. The women/men you lust after.

3. The women/men who lust after you.

If you entertain the women/men you lust after and the women/men that lust after you, you will sabotage your chances of meeting the women/men in your specific criteria. Why? The two below are your temptations and distractions. You are a temptation to your distraction and a distraction to your temptation.

Many men/women have child(ren) with the two women/men below, some have even married them and it's totally their fault. Ignorance is costly. It's deep, I know but take it in.

Learning to clear all unproven assumptions with each other is a mark of maturity. Mind your choice of words. Verbal hurt is real.

There will always be opportunists of the opposite sex who are hotter, smarter, more heart-warming and mostly more available than your partner. A relationship requires contentment, self-control and discipline otherwise you will never settle at all.

A mental health assessment is one you should carry out when qualifying someone as a potential. Observing how they respond to unfavourable circumstances and situations is important. Seeking CREDIBLE professional help in balance with your spirituality is not wrong. Mental illness can highly become mental wellness if you are willing to attend matters promptly.

On a very serious note. We really need to stop proposing each other prematurely. There is a lot you can learn about a person in good time .Let's date without making sex the optimum hype and ultimate benefit.

EJACULATIONS & ORGASMS AREN'T ENOUGH

By

NJABULO CHRISWELL SITHOLE

Women in relationships

Here are seven types of female personalities when it comes to love and relationship:

1. Booty call

The lady in a nutshell offers sex at no cost with the aim of making you her lover. She uses sex as a build-up towards a meaningful relationship. Such an attempt is common amongst women who are desperate and who are mostly obsessed with a particular guy. A number of men have impregnated such women. Why? She has the body and the necessary bedroom experiential skills to satisfy her target.

2. Conversational lady

This lady offers intellectual, spiritual, political and passionate conversations that stimulate a man's interest in her. Ninety percent of the time, women who are mere good talkers don't make good partners because they are stubborn and are unwilling to compromise for the benefit of the relationship. If you ever dare test her virtues, you are likely not to find any as her life is complicated and she shies away from fixing it. Having good conversations with men is her coping mechanism.

3. Part-time lady

These ladies are good candidates but they have no solid backbone. They are normally tossed to and fro by various influences making them very unsettled and inconsistent. Once things take a sharp turn in your life, they leave to only comeback when you are in a better season both financially and health-wise. As long as you can afford on their level, your relationship will be good enough for her to overlook all your faults and mistakes. It is unfortunate that these ladies take on multiple relationships at a time and go unnoticed most of the time.

4. The flatterer

This group of ladies are normally outspoken and have class yet they have an agenda. The way and how you meet them is a strategic setup. Normally, these ladies are out to get something or to prove a point to someone or to even win the bet of getting to you. In her pursuit to get you, she will adapt, compromise and be very flexible. She is known to carefully multi-task her missions. A role-player of note.

5. The mistress

Her hold on a committed man is evil and very sabotageous. She has no heart nor conscience. She is a mere bloodsucker that he embraces foolishly, secretly and sometimes publicly.

6. The resident queen

This is the first lady, the ultimate partner, the queen and best friend. There is nothing this type of lady wouldn't do for you. She will fight anybody threatening your companionship, support you through it all and encourage you to do right. She's aware of your potential weaknesses, shortcomings and something far greater than herself glues her to you. She's not all perfect but she is always striving and her respect for you equates to your mother's love.

7. The contenders

These ladies come from everywhere and their sole contention is for the resident lady's position. Contenders tend to even sell a man the idea of polygamy as you allow them some space into your life as a man. These contending ladies study the resident lady carefully and then create plots to expose her weaknesses to you which you were completely not aware off. Creating opportune moments, adapting their personalities to fit your criteria, cooking themselves deliciously into your stomach and unleashing themselves as available sex slaves to your fantasies. Some of these contenders disguise themselves as female friends.

Cheating is a contentment issue

Most humans want more of everything good and luxurious even if what they want has a high chance of jeopardizing what they already have. In a nutshell, greed is the enemy of contentment.

A number of rich people use their riches to lure multiple partners into their beds creating an assumption that they are the only one. Should they get caught by their lover, they will buy themselves out of the mess they created or even beat the lady for catching him in his affairs. Does this rich cheater ever stop? No, they just get better at hiding their affairs.

Poor men only cheat after they weigh their options. When the guy is confident about the other ladies he's cheating with, he will disrespect his actual partner by exposing his affairs. He then shows no remorse as he can afford to lose the current girlfriend to the greener pastures he caught. Like most women, poor men are slaves to the discontentment of women in all classes. Self-control breeds contentment. If the person that interests you has an unquenchable appetite for money, possessions and food, you're already dealing with a potential cheater.

Most men think foolishly. They think an increase in wealth is a licence to cheat. Off course! Money and fame attract women but self-control is still key even in abundance.

Don't walk with cheaters unless you are also one. As a loving friend, entertaining the foolishness of your friends is hatred.

Faithfulness and contentment are attributes you acquire as a result of self-discipline, meditating on good thoughts and having healthy associations.

Cheating is destructive to society especially in full view of upcoming youths. Before the age of 15, young people already have polluted ideas from the infidelity of their elders that they are exposed to daily. When the young see these infidelities, they tend to believe that it is the right way of living. Many adults are not apologetic about being unfaithful to their partners.

The administration of secrecy, waste of money and time that goes into cheating could be gracefully used largely on that one person you prefer and which also prefers you.

We cannot be men who embrace our elder's foolishness of being unfaithful. If you are a polygamous man, make that clear from the get-go and if she doesn't accept it, rest chief! The lie you keep will expose you at the end of the day and you will lose far much greater things because good women do not vibe with dishonest men.

The reality of your relationship lingers on your chosen perspective.

Cheating hits heavily on a man's fragile ego. Men do not forgive cheating hence many women are entangled with many secrets of unfaithfulness.

When a woman is found cheating, she loses her value in his eyes. There are men who forgive cheating and are able to reconcile with their women. Very few of these men reconcile without ulterior motives.

When a lady is cheated on, it is common for her to view herself as a victim. Cheating crashes a lady's self-esteem and magnifies her insecurities. She then develops underlining trust issues.

Cheating is rarely seen as feedback from a dissatisfied partner. In cases where the other party is dissatisfied and communication misses its mark severally, it is a clear sign to leave rather than to cheat because departure does provoke reflection and introspection most of the time.

1. Occasional cheaters

They cheat on their partners as per favourable occasion with someone they are just in lust with at that time. Which, however, is never to be repeated. "Hit and run", just for fun and thirst quenchers.

2. Loving cheater

They cheat on their partners from day one but their partner never really finds out. They are extremely smart, manipulative and cautious about their every move. This cheater gets to live in many worlds at once and never mistreats his/her partners. It's the "Good guy /woman" type of characters. They are highly respected, people's person, impactful and just attractively idealistic. They don't lie to the people they are cheating with, everything about their primary partner is known. When does the primary partner find out? After he/she dies. With this type of partner, they only let you find out what they want you to know. Which is basically those small incidents to cover up a lot that is actually happening under your nose.

3. Blatant cheater

This cheater is not afraid of getting caught because they know that you will not leave them. So they act repentant when they are caught, only to go back to the same routine until one of you eventually dies or leaves the relationship. This cheater is aware of your weak spots and has a particular strong hold on you that nobody else has.

4. Abusive cheater

This cheater will make their cheating habit to be as result of your negligence or areas where you seriously lack. Be it sexual satisfaction, communication or other qualities. They will use that as an excuse for their cheating. The worst thing is that, this cheater never apologizes or takes account for anything. You are their slave as they continue to prey on your low self-esteem daily until you leave or die.

5 .Vulnerable cheater

This cheater is sexually vulnerable. They may be in a serious relationship but the sexual vulnerability is inevitable. In order to cover up their sexual vulnerability with the fear that their partner will find out, they perform magic in bed, treat their partner right and show virtue always while they are deviously seductive and lack self-control around other people that they are sexually attracted to. All their hits are kept a secret and life goes on till death.

6. Seasonal cheaters

This cheater cheats during a particular season in a year. Otherwise, they maintain consistency except during that season of wildness. Others are secretive while others are not about their seasonal need/want to cheat on their partners.

7. Non-tracers

These cheaters are your influential and affluent people whose affairs give off no evidence unless you're really observant. They post their partners on social media and display the happy family while they are screwing the same people who react on their posts. These cheaters have second phones that are hidden in the car's spare wheel compartment, vault softwares on their phones, secret email accounts. Additional income is hidden from their spouses to fund their affairs and they have eyes that strategically wander around. They often book themselves into hotels and guest-houses separately with their mistresses as if they don't know each other only for them to meet in each other's rooms.

Part of cheating is the unconfessed realization that one is a polygamist fronting as a monogamist for the obvious reason that his female partner whom he loves dearly is against polygamy.

Are you sure we are not related?

We live in very evil times that have vast and life-changing secrets. Meeting a potential partner every single day is highly possible.

The drawback in meeting a potential partner is whether or not are you both related to each other? There are many incidences where a brother impregnates his own sister as parents have buried and hidden important information.

Our fathers have hidden their past and many girls today are fatherless as their mothers have no idea who their father might be.

This is where you realise that decisions are generational and that rewards and punishments from yesterday's thoughtless decisions are evident.

Fatherless girls are likely to end up in bed or married to their own brothers. The carelessness of their parents clearly results in unintentional incest.

Imagine discovering a few days before your wedding that the person you are about to marry is actually your own sister? These wicked secrets have caused many eligible youngsters to live the rest of their lives in sorrow, hatred and resentment towards their parents.

It would be helpful to extensively investigate the background of the gentleman or lady you are interested in. Avoid dating blindly. Gather biological information and ask the elderly.

There are many secrets in families, societies and organisations. Every form of wickedness does exist. It will surprise you how close these secrets are to you.

Types of relationships

1. Woman-only relationship

This relationship is mostly initiated by the interested woman, who goes out of her way to get the man at any cost but the problem is the man doesn't love her and his reasons for accepting the proposal are sex-related with other benefits to derive from the woman. Once it trended on Facebook where ladies would, "Shoot their shot and if they die, they die". In a nutshell women proposed men in the public eye. Such relationships don't mostly end well. Once the man finds something better, the former is left broken as the latter is what the man really loves. Infatuation at its best.

2. Man-only relationship

This type of relationship is the opposite of the woman-only relationship. The man naturally pursues the woman who however accepts the proposal with intentions to benefit from the man. Her love is based on what the man can give. The man in this relationship loves her dearly and sees a future with the lady but the lady is at the bus stop waiting for her anticipated man. She's buying time and definitely her exit from the relationship will break the good man who will become a player due to his bitterness which is idiotic and foolish.

3. Repulsive/transactional relationship

This relationship is based on what both parties can receive from each other. Sex for money and money for sex. Both parties are clearly there for what they can get from each other. Since it's transactional, they have external partners that they love and care about genuinely.

4. Dual relationship

This relationship is ideal, the two are one in everything. They have a solid foundation, common goal, an agreement, commitment to build each other for each other in all possible ways.

5. Rotating relationship

Both partners are only in love with each other at different seasons. They take turns. One season, the man alone is in love while the woman is just there receiving from the man. The next season the woman is in love while the man is just receiving the love. In a nutshell, this type of relationship is semi-parasitic as partners only love when it is convenient for them to do so.

The first three relationships are a result of trial and error in pursuit to have relationship number four. A dual relationship is work, time, love and commitment; it regenerates memories, feelings and in its nature, is selfless. A dual relationship cannot be attained unless humility, truth and love is centred on it.

Chronicles of Lies

Lies have the ability to make or break a relationship but mostly break it when the liar is exposed. Especially when the grieved party deems it as an irrevocable violation. Make allowance to what type of lies you can forgive in a partner because you are going to be lied to one way or the other.

There are various types of lies one is likely to come across in relationships:

1. Intensive lies

These are lies spoken to avoid being disadvantaged or punished immediately which often disadvantages the truthful party immediately. For example, a man is told by his sister-in-law that the children he has with her sister are not his. When the man confronts his wife, she denies the truthful allegations, accredit her own sister as a home-wrecker and a witch. Seven years later a man arrives at her matrimonial home claiming to be the father of his two children. DNA tests are taken which prove the man's allegation to be true.

2. Insecurity blowers

These are lies spoken to counter attack visible and intuitional insecurities. For example, your woman senses that you are having an affair with the lady client you are going to meet for lunch. You, however, brush her concern off with sweet affirming words, send her money and promise her a romantic dinner later on.

3. Misrepresentation

These are lies spoken in order to present yourself as a favourable preference to the person of your interest. For example, a lady can lie about not having children and about being employed and about her health status in order to fit her pursuer's criteria.

4. Habitual lies

These lies are spoken to brush off the person at enquiry continuously. For example, a guy's wife claims to have been at her mother's house while she was with her side-guy. The husband buys the story until he decides to spy on his wife on one particular day. He disguises himself and drives a different car and follows her lead to a particular location. He then calls her to enquire about her whereabouts as he has just come back from work. As usual, she lies and says that she is at her mother's house. The husband sends his wife pictures of her exact location and tells her to leave their home immediately.

5. Holy lies

These are lies spoken with no intention to cause harm. For example, a pastor fabricates a testimonial report for his daughter to get employed even though she is not a member of the church.

6. Truth twisters

These are lies spoken with the aim to twist the visible and evident truth. For example, a wife catches her husband sexting another woman and he denies it on the spot when confronted.

Whether you like it or not lies do not remain hidden forever. Spare yourself the loss by coming out. Get rid of your lies before they get rid of you. A lot of what we call communication problems is actually perpetuated by dishonesty.

Before you lie to someone else, you first have to lie to yourself and believe those lies. The energy invested on the lie will be reciprocated either with a reward or with a punishment. It's better to lose the person with the truth than to win them over with a lie because when the truth comes out, the chances of losing your own life are very high.

Married men are known to paint their wives as bad partners in front of the women they are lusting over and just want to bang. Stupidly most single or women who are in relationships buy into such proposals in order to benefit sexually or financially. What makes women easy prey for married men is primarily the hatred women have towards each other. This is also common amongst married women. They make the prospective man think that he is the “Saviour” of her failing marriage. Lies told by men are usually caught out easily as men cannot use emotions to optimise their appeals.

Like anything you got unjustly, entering a relationship or marriage with lies is going to backfire or even kill you. Especially if the person you lied to is short-tempered.

Love-seeking single parents

Society breeds of a lot of single parents who are still searching vastly for a relationship, who desperately throw themselves at suitors, those who are patiently and hopefully waiting to be found.

You will find the following single parents in your pursuit:

1. The Indecisive pursuer

This pursuer is indecisive and is often tossed to and fro by the other parent. She/he only commits to you when the parenting partner is in a new relationship. He/she uses you as a means to spite the other parenting partner. He/she will go to the extent of influencing the child/children involved to sabotage your relationship with your new partner. It is like the other parenting partner has a hold on him/her that's so deep.

2. The occasional pursuer

This is a single parent that pursues a lady, charms her and even lures her to bed with no intention to commit. He uses the lady to spend his time, money and to relieve his erection. Ladies who are single parents do this too.

3. The decisive pursuer

This pursuer will play his/her cards in the open, familiarize you with the idea of step-parenting , love you immensely but not above his/her children and at the sometime open the door for you to leave if you see that you cannot handle his/her situation. Once you agree, he/she is going to commit to you fully and balance his/her life into equal portions.

4. The obsessed pursuer

He/she is a single parent that is obsessed with you. He/she pursues you despite the number of times you reject and block him/her. More like a persistent demon that's way out of your preferences regardless of how beautiful, handsome, loaded and well-known they are.

Single parents are free to hit on whoever they prefer without trying to blackmail or guilt-trip whoever they are pursuing or being pursued by.

Respecting preferences

When it comes to love and relationships, we all have preferences. However, people always have a hard time accepting that they aren't preferred by a certain bachelor or bachelorette. These people who are mostly not preferred by a bachelor or a bachelorette tend to go to dangerous extents in order to gain impossible preference.

The only person with the right to violate your preference is yourself. If you prefer someone without a child, you automatically reject a potential who has a child for your own reasons. As noted that many people do not take rejection very well, other people will make sure that they spite your current partner on social media, spread false rumours about your partner and literally try to be with you through casting spells. Clearly understand that the contention for your heart is a heavy one viewed differently by all your pursuers.

There are three types of seekers:

1. Non-discriminatory Seekers

The sole purpose of these seekers is to find someone to love and to be loved. All other things do not matter.

2. Specific Seekers

These seekers have a criteria that must be met before they commit to them or try to build love with them. The criteria is based on character traits, possessions, etc.

3. Idlers

These seekers are not really seeking. The intention is to waste time. They play along as they enjoy the benefits derived from each other.

Potentials you do not prefer are most likely to do the following:

1. Ensnare you to bed so that you can impregnate them.
2. Trouble your chosen partner.

3. Walk away peacefully.
4. Seasonally propose to you (Cold-call).
5. Manipulate you into a polygamous relationship.
6. Offer you an affair.
7. Kidnap you.
8. Kill you or your partner.

It is important that you do not leave things hanging with the ladies you once pursued. Make it clear that they did not make the cut, otherwise these ladies will be a tempting opportunity for you to cheat on your chosen partner.

Parents, religious leaders, friends, siblings and mentors tend to want to have an input with regards to our preferences so it is off importance to watch out for these match-making bloodsuckers.

Settling with someone does not always mean that they were the best option. It is highly important to prefer someone that also prefers you otherwise you will always be begging them to love you and to give you attention. You will definitely lose yourself for nothing.

Potentials are not necessarily avoiding you instead they are avoiding the hurt that comes with your presence.

Certain preferences are developed from hurtful and regrettable experiences. In a nutshell, preferences have references.

The danger of habits

There's no way that you are going to be in a relationship and not encounter each other's habits. There are habits that you are going to tolerate and there are habits that are likely to cause conflict.

It is highly imperative to familiarise yourself with your potential's habits during the talking-stage. People are very smart. Smart enough to hide their unproductive habits so that they can lure you into their lives.

You can't find a woman who is an alcoholic and expect her to drop her alcohol because you are now in a relationship with her. You found her like that. The willingness to change must come from herself not because you are instructing her to do so as her man. Otherwise, you are going to bring out the hypocrite in her.

There are various types of habits:

1. Fixed habits

These habits are not productive and the potential partner is not willing to change or let them go. Your tolerance is expected.

2. Flexible habits

These are habits that are not productive and your potential partner is willing to change and work on them in order to improve. They will however require your unconditional support.

3. Hidden habits

This is when you know that your potential partner or current partner will not tolerate your unproductive habits so you continue with them in private and in secret. If they find out about these unproductive habits, they are likely to reject you or leave you completely.

Contrasting habits tend to become instant deal-breakers. There is a growing tendency in potential partners to hide unproductive habits as they lure you into their lives - watch out!

Find someone who will complement your lifestyle. It is even much better when your lifestyles can be consolidated.

Ex-lovers that won't rest

It is however common for exes not to easily rest regardless of them being the cause of the separations at times.

You can be over someone who is not over you and somewhere in their minds, there is still hope to reconcile the love you once shared despite the numerous efforts you have done to show them your lack of interest.

Exes use the following techniques to get your attention:

1. Cold-calling

The ex-lover calls out of nowhere just to check up on you. This is to simply gauge if there is still room for them to come back. In some cases they persuade you using a lot of emotional tricks with the aim of swinging your feelings towards them especially when the ex is familiar with your soft spots.

2. Pitch-ups

Since you aren't taking their calls or responding to their appeals. The next step is to pick you up at your workplace, family gathering, meeting, church, etc. Common places where your ex can pick you up are always packed with people who are close to you and who favour your ex over your current partner.

3. Gifts

Exes know a lot about you and the dates that are special to you. They will buy you gifts that will make your heart melt for all the occasions that are important to you.

4. Out-performance

They use a cousin or a sister to gather information about your current partner and then proceed to buy support from your cousin or sister or from those who are close to you especially since he cannot have direct contact with you. He or she will send you money and gifts that are far beyond your current partner's affordability through his/her agents. These exes will also let you know of their progress in life through these agents.

5. Character assassination

Ex-lovers will gather information about your current partner, spy on them and create traps for your partner in an effort to sabotage your relationship so that you can come running back to them. Blackmailing is also a technique they use.

6. Murder

Obsessive lovers can kill or arrange for your partner to be killed so that they can be with you especially since your current lover is a stumbling block to the possibility of you two getting back together.

7. Sell-outs

Ex-lovers will do whatever it takes to get support from your immediate family and friends who will put pressure on you to rekindle the love you once had.

Now, if you don't have a backbone, you will definitely fall for these traps especially if the sell-outs point out valid points that make your current partner appear inferior.

There are many more techniques that ex-lovers use. It is therefore important to gauge someone's mental health before you even date them otherwise you are likely to get others and yourself killed.

Safeguarding your relationship from opportunists requires honesty and openness from both partners but that cannot be done unless deep friendship is built.

Comparisons

When your past relationships and current contenders challenge your current relationship in such a way that they seem better compared to your current relationship, your character is tested as a partner.

It is tempting to move into a mansion with your ex instead of building that very mansion with your current partner. Many people have always taken the easy way out and regret failing the tests of character. Everything that's worthwhile is going to be tested.

You can't expect your current partner to blossom like your ex. They are running two different life races. So often women fall into the trap of directly and indirectly comparing their exes with their current partners which in most cases is lethal to a man's fragile ego. Nothing puts a man into a coma like being compared to his partner's ex. To him. It feels like his partner is teaming up with her ex to destroy him.

Familiarize yourself with what is ahead

You don't start investing in marriage the day you get married. You start investing in marriage the day, the desire for marriage finds you.

It is important to familiarise yourself with the challenges that were experienced by others because there is really nothing new ahead.

The problems in your relationship are not new. The solutions are not new. They are old, simple, worth searching for and applying diligently.

I attended a marriage seminar hosted by Bishop Dununu Msibi in 2019. Just by attending that seminar I received a divine impartation that watered my world-famous book, “Umjolo masimba”.

Pride is the self-inflicted wound that is standing in your way of becoming a great partner and having a great relationship.

I constantly study everything that has to do with relationships, take advice and give advice where it will be valued. Beyond the knowledge and wisdom I have received from God Almighty, humility is my priority in everything.

If you don't resolve existing problems in your relationship, chances of them showing their fruit in your marriage are high. Ignoring the rotten parts of your relationship will spoil every other part eventually.

Who is advising you regarding your relationship? Do you have older people who you look up as good marriage examples? You cannot date and marry a great man without you acquainting yourself with older women who are married to men that are on the similar path as that of your potential husband. Why? There are no new cases and nobody is better equipped to advice you right like older women who live and strive with such men. Mostly do you as a potential helper have a deep relationship with God Almighty? If not, how are you going to complement a man that's called by God Almighty?

Many women want beautiful marriages but are not willing to have mentors in grannies who had successful marriages. You see this arrogance in young women when they have women empowerment seminars, these happily married old ladies are not invited as speakers instead they will invite nonsensical feminists who are home wreckers of note then you wonder why their relationships and marriages aren't successful. Old wells know all kinds of buckets. Don't underestimate grey hairs, wrinkled faces, bent knees and rough hands.

When you take worldly counsel to feed a godly relationship, you are mostly to destroy its godly essence. Feed a relationship according to its origin unless you are changing its foundation altogether. The handbook (manual) of your car recommends what's best for your car. The day you use what is not recommended for your car, the factory warranty is null and void. The manufacturer only accounts for its recommendations. When you are a Spirit-led person and you date a flesh-driven person without remorseful repentance because they are supposedly "Christian". Your dimension of operation is already in conflict.

Money matters

It is really sad that so many relationships exist because one or both of the parties have money while other relationships are at the mercy of the partner that has money.

There are five personalities in relationships when it comes to money:

1. Financial commander

This partner uses money as a means to gain control over the other partner. Whether male or female this partner pushes the other partner into submission as they have not acquired as much money as they have.

2. Independent lovers

Both partners can afford almost anything they want and if one of them was to go broke because of various reasons, the other partner who has money automatically leaves the relationship as they cannot afford to be in a relationship with someone who is broke.

3. Dual financiers

In this relationship both partners help each other financially. Both partners understand the family backgrounds they are building from and they are committed to helping each other build. A financial partnership makes sense when you have joint financial goals.

4. Lavish lover

This partner will spend their money on you especially for non-essential things and activities instead of helping finance activities that can help you grow financially. Such partners are destructive and selfish. Such a partner would rather finance a vacation that costs the same amount as the purchase order their partner is struggling to get funding for without remorse. These partners will withhold financial assistance from the other because they are afraid of their partner succeeding, succeeding far much greater than them. When their partner is back on their feet again, the same partner that was unwilling to help them will be the one requiring assistance.

5. Notorious lover

A notorious lover is a partner who will help you financially but you are not allowed to help them in return. They will even fight you if you dare help them. If you persist on helping them financially despite them rejecting, you will not be appreciated. The pride in them will not ask for help or accept any help. Instead they will sulk in their misery until they can help themselves. Off course! It will make you feel useless as a partner. Understand that there are reasons to why they are failing to accept help from you. It is important to find out what those reasons are and eliminate those viewpoints through constant assurance and affirmation.

6. Parasitic lover

A parasitic lover is a partner who will drain you financially. This partner is forever in need, is not financially disciplined with their money and has no form of financial accountability. This partner isn't willing to achieve any form of financial stability and they are forever expecting assistance even with unnecessary things. In the process, parasitic lovers master the art of lying to you about things they don't need.

The most peaceful couples are those who are at the same adjusted level of affordability, stable mentality and with an understanding that with time, hard work and God's grace, they will advance together eventually. Sometimes having a partner who can afford at a greater level than you especially if they don't have humility, can be your downfall. You will always try to compete with other women/men at your partner's level of affordability.

Common sense is if you date someone whose affordability level is below yours, you seek to empower them to be at the same level as you.

It doesn't take more than six months to discover your partner's money personality. Growing into a financial personality that is beneficial for your relationship will require time, assurance, encouragement and agreement.

WAIT! LET US GO BACK TO THE BASICS.

Background analysis

When passion and chemistry is high at the beginning of a relationship and you so want to rip each other's clothes off. You tend to overlook or never ask important questions.

THREE important questions to ask a partner of your interest soberly so:

1. Who were you?

This question dives deep into his/her past, surveying past relationships, personal bad/good choices, and sexual experiences and tracing their life's path.

2. Who you are now?

Basically you are asking the person about the changes they underwent, growth in various aspects of their lives and what's really going on currently in their lives.

3. Who do you intend on becoming?

This question draws you to understanding their ambitions, purpose, pursuits in the various aspect of their lives and mostly how compatible you are to him/her.

Unfortunately we tend to rush through this process, compromise severely on certain principles and values because we like the idea of the person in our lives and not necessarily the reality therefore we suffer later on.

Types of lovers

1. Honeymooners

First time lovers, butterflies in the stomach, everything is flowing well, roses, quality time and great love.

2. Recoveries/team-spirit

Healed, rediscovered themselves, know their worth and are open to trying again.

3. Never-mind gents/ladies

They have been played, they take nothing serious, casual sex, they cheat bluntly and they don't care how they make the other party feel.

4. Broken gents/ladies

Bitter, not over their ex, low self-esteem, insecure, low self-care, rude and chase men/women away.

If you look at the above persons. It is actually a cycle most of us have experienced and in every rotation, it is our responsibility to learn and to avoid inflicting pain onto others.

Most of the time , it is in ignoring crucial red flags that get us going through this cycle and going through this cycle is tiring to one's soul.

There is a portion of people parked at "Never-mind gents/ladies", who are making the relationship experience a living hell for others.

Virtue is key in finding the right partner, it is also key in keeping the relationship afloat yet two cannot go far unless they agree.

Clash of family culture

In many relationships, family cultures clash big time . For example, I was raised in a loving home with both parents. My parents never shouted at each other and my dad used to treat my mom like a queen, she was spoiled for days then I meet a lady who comes from a family that broke apart, abuse, name-shaming and fights between the parents. Off-course! We will have a great honeymoon phase but come the conflict stage. If she's not psychologically balanced, she will want to fight and name-shame me when what I am used to is talking matters out quietly and maturely. No matter how much I say I love that lady. Her perspective on love and relationship doesn't match mine. Eventually the relationship will dissolve.

We need to ask these questions before dating someone: What is your reference of marriage/relationship/love? Why? If we don't agree on the foundation of the relationship, we cannot build strong together.

You have chemistry but are you compatible in regards to family culture? What's your partner's reference of a household? You must ask this question otherwise you will find yourself in trouble.

I know men and women who are stuck in marriages with partners who don't want children. I know gents and ladies whose partners were raised by single mothers who birthed in them various toxic attitudes about the opposite sex. A "I don't need a man" woman and a "I want to build with my wife" guy aren't compatible in regards to their background especially if the lady isn't teachable and willing to unlearn attitudes taught to her by her bitter mother.

This is something to talk about with your partner as it has tremendous influence towards the success of your relationship. You both must come into agreement.

Households are not the same

I remember visiting my uncle's son for a weekend. My cousin and I slept on the floor in the kitchen as my uncle had a two room house. Right in the middle of the night, I was awoken by sounds of my aunt crying, shouting and begging my uncle not to beat her. I then looked at my cousin whose eyes were teary and asked him what was happening. We cried silently together. My uncle beat his wife up to blindness. In the morning I ran to the Onecell container to call my dad, requesting him to come fetch me. I never actually told my parents why I wanted to come home.

I look at the psychological effect, their upbringing has had on my cousins. Abusive traits are evident in their current relationships as a result of their upbringing and personal decisions. I come from a loving home that's totally different altogether from theirs. A person's upbringing has tremendous influence in how he/she relates to others. Don't overlook their upbringing without taking necessary precautions.

Some men will beat you up exactly like how their fathers beat up their mothers while others will love and treat you royally, the same way their fathers treated their mothers. Boys imitate their fathers or men that play a father role in their lives. Regardless of my dad having passed on, I have adopted many other good fatherly examples around me.

Clash of upbringing

Parents who haven't taught their children well are always afraid of the ridicule they are likely to get from their in-laws.

Relationships tend to expose a partner's upbringing. If you grew up being the only child, entitled to everything and you were never taught how to be generous and selfless, there's a high possibility that you will be possessive, self-centred and selfish even in your own relationship especially if life did not give you the opportunity to unlearn certain teachings.

Sometimes a partner's parents wonder how the other partner is able to handle their child since he/she has been spoilt.

The grooming of a child is fundamentally important because it affects all his/her relationships with others throughout life. Parents get to see what they planted in their children as they grow.

Children who come from good homes will always repel association with children who don't come from good homes. Their norms, beliefs and values tend to clash even as friends.

It is important that as you grow older, you identify wrong teachings from your own parents and replace them with the right ones that will serve your own life and that you will even pass on to your own children one day . The goal isn't just to relate well with each other but to raise noble citizens.

The type of families that exist in society:

1. Ideal household

Children are raised by both their mother and father who are happily married together.

2. Estranged household

Children are raised by both their mother and father but their parents do not sleep in the same bedroom. They live together like housemates and they have external relationships.

3. Divorced

Parents are separated and the children live in between the parents.

4. Step-parents

Children live with their biological parents who are separated but are now married again to other partners.

5. Single-parent

Children reside with either their mother or father.

6. Sibling-headed home

The household is headed by an older sibling as the parents are either deceased or nowhere to be found or both parents are inactive in their children's lives.

7. Guardian households

The household is headed by an elected or assigned guardian.

All these type of households have their dynamics and erroneous teachings that can impact how partners relate to one another in a relationship.

The differences from each other's upbringing can be mended provided the relationship is founded on universal principles and values that can be soberly inherited by your children one day.

If both partners are inflexible to change, the chances of the relationship reaching its optimum height are very slim.

Parental interference

Nothing is as lame as having a partner that has no solid backbone. Imagine a married man whose finances are managed by his mother and a married lady who's forever quick to give in to his father's influence even when it is wrong.

Keep away from partners that come from dysfunctional families especially when they aren't willing to correct in themselves the wickedness that exists in their families otherwise you will not have peace in your relationship experience together.

Christian or not. The family your prospective partner comes from will influence a lot of aspects in your relationship together. Worse is when your prospective partner doesn't have a strong discerning backbone. He/she will always heed the voices of his/her family more than the resolutions you have together. Why? Your prospective in-laws will test and fight you through your partner. Don't be fooled by their smiles at you - these idiots are forever up to no good.

Ladies from rich families have very bad tendencies which are the norms taught to them by their parents: Traits such as controlling ,dictating, undermining, belittling, spiteful, boastful, prideful ,rude, inconsiderate, self-centred , unkind and no sense of accountability.

These “Daddy's little girls” are mostly groomed for failure in their relationships with others. They don't view people as individuals worthy to be loved but rather as utensils to be used. “Mama's boys” also fit into the category explained above perfectly.

This is not to say that parents aren't supposed to advise or give caution, but rather to say that parents need to let go and to allow their own children to make their own decisions. Parents are usually the ones who are worried about the family's reputation and care less about the happiness of their children. Children everywhere are used as transactions between families.

Children from rich families are prohibited from marrying into middle-class families by their own parents. Middle-class families are also not free from such transactions. Off course! If you were to defy such transactions, punishment from your parents is inevitable. If you marry the person they do not deem suitable for you and that marriage fails, you won't hear the end of it. Either way voices will rise before or after you take your decision. You just have to live with the noise and if you can shut them up, shut them up.

Don't involve yourself in the family matters of your partner. At the end of the day you are an outsider. Rather advise your partner on how to react and respond. Why? Your potential in-laws are not really fond of you as you think anyway.

The girl and her father vs the boy and his mom

I have looked at this for years and I have come to realize that the way I treat my mom is evident in how I treat all women in my life. I then looked at my sister and the way she handles her relationship.

Guess what I found? Her relationship was no way different than the one she had with my late father.

I dated ladies who father's were absent. The need for a father's love was evident. While some of these ladies outsourced fathers in their uncles and grandfathers. The influences of these men was evident in our relationship.

A lady who has had so many disappointments from her own father which she hasn't forgiven him for, will always burst that very bitterness into the relationship the day you disappoint her. Most of these "Men are trash" women have serious daddy issues. A girl's first boyfriend is her dad or anybody who plays a daddy figure to her. Ever wondered why a lady will fall in love with you more if her dad approves the relationship? Nothing makes a woman entirely happy like two of her best males getting along with each other. The opposite is also true. If you don't get along with a man's mother, your relationship is likely to be hell. That old lady has tremendous influence on his son unfortunately. It will also be very unfortunate if you and your partner don't discern the type of influence both your parents have on you. Some influences are dangerously toxic. Knowing the power of influence your parent(s) have on you, he/she is likely to be mischievous and evil towards your partner through you.

Now here is a new dimension. What if we stop standardizing our partners based on our parents affirmation? Our parent's perception about our partners can be extremely dented especially when they prefer someone else for you. Your parent will always prefer someone they see themselves in and who they can also have control over unfortunately. Parents want to parent you even in your relationship, they have serious attachment issues. Parents gauge themselves in your partner. If your partner is less or more than your parent in most fundamental aspects, your parent is likely to reject him/her. I don't know about you but I wouldn't date a woman who is exactly like my mom. My mom is a good woman but man! I can do better than my dad! I want to present to my mom a woman she could have become. Silly right? My mother married a man far much better than his own father hence my dad and grandfather got along by chance. My grandfather wasn't very fond of my dad instead he was intimidated by him because my dad was exactly the man , my grandfather failed to become regardless of that, my dad wholeheartedly served my grandfather .

Write a better history and be savagely progressive.

Spiritual clashes

In many instances, women give up their own religion to follow the ones of their husbands and boyfriends in order to showcase their adaptability.

Partners with contrasting beliefs are not commonly known to find common ground and as a result they dissolve the relationship.

Conviction can be dangerous for the relationship. Many prophets govern relationships as they perpetuate their religious demands on their followers. However, most sensible partners do not tolerate religious propaganda.

Divisions are evident in all religions and these divisions tend to affect relationships especially when one of the partners does not share the same conviction.

For a Christian man to marry a lady who equates God Almighty to her ancestors in the same equation is taboo. The opposite is also true, however people do gamble beyond all sensibility.

Some may feel that marrying within their religion and belief is old and much boxed in to some extent, but truth be told, it saves lives.

It is important to learn from the lives of those who decided to marry outside their religions and beliefs and observe the various challenges they face and then ask yourself whether this is the kind of life you want for yourself.

Deal-breakers

Years ago a friend of mine was going through a “talking stage” with a particular lady that he was interested in. The lady later confessed that she was sexually active and that being in a relationship with my friend who is sexually abstinent will be challenging. She further elaborated that she would have to find a sexual partner while in a relationship with him. This was their deal-breaker.

A neighbour of mine once hit a lady's DM using two different accounts. On the one account he was himself and on the other he was someone else. The lady at hand was said to be highly principled but her responses to both accounts differed. On the account where he was himself, the lady introduced herself as someone who is abstaining and on the other account she admitted to have put on the Proverbs 31 woman facade. Basically, she portrayed two different personalities.

On his real account she insisted on them waiting for marriage before having sex and on the other one she was open to sex from the very first day without even being in a relationship with the guy.

My neighbour advanced to initiate a relationship with her hoping that she might tell the other guy that she was now in a relationship, but instead she denied when he asked her on the other account whether she was in a relationship with someone.

On the guy's original account she was difficult, principled and did not want to give him her numbers while on the other one she instantly gave him her numbers without a run for his money. The gentleman concluded and ended the relationship. The technique is called a "Two-point verification".

It is important to clearly define your deal-breakers and to communicate them to your potential partner without any fear. Subsiding your deal-breakers is going to have you complaining, it will leave you discouraged and you will negatively influence others.

Remember that your deal-breakers do not apply to everyone. There are suitors who only want those who are already in relationships and marriages.

Your deal-breakers are an expression of your principles, values and your level of tolerance.

A lack of improvement in the necessary qualities that are highly essential for the success of a relationship is a deal-breaker.

IT'S TIME FOR SOME DEEP TALK!

Knowing your partner's vulnerabilities

Whenever you compromise your partner's needs, you intensify his or her vulnerability. Especially when you are able to meet those needs but you selfishly decide not to.

8 years ago I personally became an active temptation to a married lady. I was indirectly fulfilling needs that her husband overlooked and ignored. When I became aware of this, I realized I was coming in between two people who were joined together by God Almighty. I distanced myself from the lady, cut off all kinds of communication with her without having any second thoughts.

Not many partners will show you their vulnerable side because of your negligence, while others are keen on showing you. Some partners will allow you to catch them cheating as a means to grab your attention.

A married lady expressed on a television programme how she had not been touched by her husband for more than one year and six months. She noted that she doesn't want to commit adultery but she is tempted and has been appealing to her husband to hear her cry.

This case is the opposite of most common cases where men are mostly the ones who complain about their wives not fulfilling their sexual needs. Such grievances do lead to divorce.

Relationships are like engines. If one part of the engine is affected, all the other parts that are connected to the affected part will take on a lot of strain if not attended to and will obviously lead to greater repair costs. If you are not able to meet your partner's needs, deal with the underlining and unresolved issues. It would be best for to you outline them promptly.

You will find that the husband is refraining from intimacy with his wife because his wife is disrespectful. As it is always said that, “For every reaction there is an action”. As you patiently explore the problem, you will find the root cause. Once the root cause is identified, addressed and solved everything will go back to normal. Love amongst two people is revived when there is forgiveness and if not, you have not really forgiven.

Women have traumas

There's an explanation for her reactions and responses to particular situations or challenges. When your woman doesn't want you to have female friends. It is because she can relate to incidences where her previous partners had affairs with their female friends. It might not have happened to her, perhaps she has seen it somewhere or heard about it from other women. Bottom line is women do not trust each other around their men perhaps to say they don't trust their men's level of self-control.

If she was ever been in an abusive relationship before and you tend to do just a few faults that trigger old wounds. She will definitely snap at you. Women hate to have previous hurts replayed before them especially in their current relationships.

At times, it might not be the trauma from their previous relationships that make women unable to love fully but traumas they've collected from childhood. What they saw in their parents, what they saw in their societies, what they saw in their families and what they see on TV soapies. Women have less tolerance for reoccurring traumas. They know how it will end so they avoid it.

On the other hand some women want those trauma to occur again and again. They do not see themselves as being toxic as they normalize various traumas from different stages of their lives.

Women vs growth

There are three types of women in relation to overall life growth:

1. Flexible woman

She is very much willing to grow as she daily unlearns and learns on how she can become the best version of herself. You see it through her media and literature consumption. She prioritizes self-reflection, self-introspection, repents and mends relationships. She has found herself in God Almighty.

2. Complacent woman

She has been flexible but got discouraged as life portrayed many unfair, tragic and hurtful situations. She has questioned the point of being good, gracious and righteous. She hasn't let go off what she learnt or become. She is aware of her potential but fear and cowardliness has her content with her previous progress. She entertains everything that's against the godly drive in her, thus making her resentful at God Almighty and often finds herself with tremendous regret after taking part in ungodly activity.

3. Inflexible woman

She is unapologetically given to her natural evil ways. She's immoral to the core. There are no righteous rules to her exception of life holistically. She embraces her friendship with Satan and she is often found very disruptive to anything constructive. She is everywhere causing division, passing slander, wrecking homes and intruding marriages. There is no evil she won't do to anybody.

At what phase did you walk into his LIFE?

I always hear women everywhere say that they want ready-made men. It is their preference at the end of the day which has to be respected.

There are four seasons in a man's life:

1. Adolescence stage

He is never serious about anything. He is all about fun and risking it all. He hardly has principles and he is all over the place seeking to belong.

2. Self-discovery stage

This is the part in his life where he is really discovering himself. He is discovering a greater sense of existence, his mission in life and purpose. He seeks to understand what will work for him, what kind of partner and friends he needs.

3. Working stage

This not about employment but rather the labour of his life. This is his striving phase. Here he will leave his profession for a greater call and purpose. This phase tends to be full of suffering and requires a strong support system.

4. Reaping stage

Material, spiritual and financial abundance not as a result of age but rather as a reward for finding his purpose and loving his passion.

At any stage in his life, death lurks as the duration of his life is predestined.

These stages in a man's life tend to happen simultaneously so. Gauge the phase at which you are walking into his life. With every phase, the danger of moving onto the next phase without you is there especially if you are not willing to adapt to the good and proper man that he is becoming.

It is however very risky to get involved with someone who is still finding herself or himself. You might be part of their growth or their elimination as they grow into whatever they feel convicted to.

Communication

You must always communicate your expectations so that you don't grow bitter, resentful and become secretly disappointed by others.

Most partners are insensitive to each other as they don't offer sympathy to each other especially when one of them is grieved by both internal and external factors. Have you ever shared something disappointing and saddening with your partner only to regret doing so because they brushed it off like nobody's business?

Selfish communicators are partners who require communal benefits from one party but hardly give the same benefits to the other. Most women are that selfish. You see it during talking stages, in friendships and relationships. They just don't listen, give heart or care to hear men out and to sympathize with them instead they will push their own agendas. Men don't speak out because women don't care to even listen at times.

In what tone should an apology come in? Harsh or soft? Nobody receives a harsh apology anyway. In what tone should you address matters? Harsh or soft?

There is a way to correct without sounding judgmental, to criticize without ridiculing, to explain without belittling, to confront without embarrassing and to instruct without being superior.

Forgiveness is love's core

Before you enter a relationship or marriage. Ask God Almighty to grant you the grace to forgive everything. There is no way that your partner is not going to offend and wrong you.

It is sad that we are the generation that makes adultery the ultimate sin that is worth divorce and we are unforgiving forgetting that the same measure will be used against us by God Almighty.

The very generation that requires everyone else to be forgiving and patient with them but we are impatient and not forgiving - that alone is toxic.

It is wrong for anyone to think they are dating or marrying an angel. There is no flawless or non-erring human. As long as everyone is still gracefully sharpening their characters; you are going to wrong one another.

Forgiveness doesn't just excuse the offence. It reinstates the offender as a person worthy of being loved unconditionally.

Forgiveness is not only shown with words but with actions too. How you respond, react and interact with the very people who have wronged you, either supports your words or nullifies them completely.

When someone has wronged you, even after you say you have forgiven them, you act strange towards them because you are not off God as you claim.

It doesn't matter how long you have been together. If the humility to forgive one another wholly isn't there, you might as well end the relationship immediately.

Commitment requires contentment

Marketers are trained to deceive women into buying things they already have. The appeal the enemy uses on both partners is no different. The thought that the grass is greener on the other side is a complete illusion. The appeal of contenders is fashioned to be more than what your partner is. So you leave your partner for another only to find that even the new partner isn't enough. What then? You are not addressing the issue you have with contentment. If you aren't content, you can't be committed.

This is a commitment, you come home to it whether you feel like it or not. Commitment has no feelings or logic; it is Spirit!

Violating a man's ego

As males we are egotists and we don't like it when our woman praise other men in our presence. Our jealousy is like God's. We don't share praise from our women.

We hate being compared and we hate it when our women praise other men especially in our presence.

I remember a female client praising me in front of her husband. That friendly compliment crushed his husband as he became defensive about his usefulness. It's like your partner asking another man for help or even asking another man to help your situation altogether.

Reminds me of a time where a lady asked for financial help for his son while the boyfriend did not know about the transaction. The guy's ego was severely damaged when he found out. Men hate being rendered useless by their women.

Should you as a woman render your partner useless, you will unfortunately be de-merited. That man will never take you serious and he's definitely going to cheat on you one way or the other.

Ever asked yourself as a woman why men lose love for you when you interfere in his business? Men want to rule – It is God-given for them to do that.

Disrespectful women are enjoyed by men for various self-satisfying reasons.

Women need to learn to be sensitive to our fragile egos. A respectful woman is 100 times more attractive than a bodily gifted woman or an intelligent woman.

There are few things you don't do to a man: You don't ridicule him, undermine him, insult him, compare him, talk about your exes, babysit him, nag him, praise other men in front of him, raise your voice at him, interfere in his dealings, control his decisions and order him around. Instead you: praise him, encourage him, seduce him, choose the right tone when addressing matters, exalt him above other men, submit to him, respect him, suggest ideas to him and you open his eyes half, the rest is on him to do.

In conclusion, my father had his own chair, sofa, cup, spoon, plate, glass, knife and fork. If you as a lady miss this life teaching, men are going to leave you that I can assure you.

Crazy expectations

Is it not interesting how most women who are single parents are said to be done with having children while you as a man without any children are expected to understand and accept her as she is?

If the tables were turned, most women wouldn't even look at you as a potential husband with so many kids. In fact, you would be a no-go area, a dangerous hazard to be avoided.

Ladies will receive cautions not to give wife benefits to their boyfriends while the same ladies are receiving husband benefits from these men. Women are told that if they give their boyfriends wife benefits, these gentlemen will not marry them. Which in actual truth is rubbish.

Once a lady graduates to this parasitic mind-set she is not worth it. Right there, they have taught her to be selfish, self-centred and naive. "Go all out in marriage. Relationships do not guarantee marriage”, so they said. If this is the new norm, I advise men to withhold giving wife benefits. Gentlemen keep your heartfelt messages, money, gifts, flowers, spa vouchers and everything else until they agree to marry you. Save all the energy for marriage. I hope that settles the score.

This is not about sex being a benefit. There is a friendship and a partnership that has to be built. You cannot avoid the risk that comes with loving someone by withholding the love that is reciprocally due to them.

You are not acting desperate when you respond to a man's love in a love language that he understands and appreciates. When his intentions are clear and he shows it through his actions, it is only fair to reciprocate his love languages.

Many women are dating men based on other people's timelines. They are competing with their friends, enemies, siblings and cousins.

Every relationship is unique and has its time of maturing. If your friend got married within 8 months of dating and you aren't married despite having a relationship of four years, it doesn't mean the guy won't marry you especially if he's working towards the promise he has made to you. The least you could do as a female partner is to respect, encourage and affirm that man of yours. His time will come. Off course your patience is being tested. Tests before marriage lead to a smooth marriage and tests within marriage makes the suffering worthwhile.

A relationship is a platform to strive and to express your love for one another, to overcome challenges together and to resolve conflicts together. Relationships don't work with selfish, complacent, un-rigid and unforgiving people.

Women need attention

It doesn't matter how busy you are as a man, you can spare 5 to 10 minutes to ring your partner up or send her a text.

Ever asked yourself why a married woman is having affair with an unemployed man while her husband is at work? The unemployed man gives that woman attention all the time and spends time with her.

The needs of a woman are her weakness when they are not met by the man she loves and the opposite is also true.

When it comes to attention there are four types of women:

1. Need exchangers

These ladies exchange time with married and committed men by presenting them with an opportunity to fulfil their sexual needs. Very few men say “no” to sex especially if it comes from a woman they are sexually attracted to. In a nutshell these women exchange sex for attention and sometimes for other benefits too.

2. Attention Wanderers

These ladies are married and they are in relationships. They are forever looking for attention everywhere. They basically like attention from any man except their own partners and they are forever discontent with the attention they receive from their partners.

3. Attention hangers

These ladies are in a relationship or in a marriage. They long for attention from their partners and they are very faithful. All they want is attention from their men who are either ignorant, unwilling or busy giving other women attention.

4. Attention idlers

These ladies are not actively looking or needing attention .They have suppressed their need for attention and have rendered themselves as man's property that is tossed to and fro by the man's mood.

Our improvement as men in satisfying a woman's need for attention is in not suppressing our expression of love towards her.

However it is also the woman's duty to make sure that she is fertile to receive attention from the man that loves her.

There are a lot of ways in which we as men can give a woman attention such as random flirty texts, sending her flowers and appreciating her randomly. Women are not asking for much, we just don't want to give it to them at times...

Conflict resolution

It is imperative that partners develop models together that will help them resolve conflicts that may arise in their relationships. There are various models which are common amongst successful marriages:

1. Mediator

The couple visits a neutral marriage counsellor who will weigh both sides of the story and thereafter offer a list of solutions.

2. Holy Spirit

The Holy Spirit convicts both partners to reconcile with each other.

3. Weekly reflections

The couple sits down together in a quiet place to reflect on the achievements and challenges of the relationship. They then formulate strategies to tackle the challenges and to improve on their progress.

4. Instant confrontations

Should one partner err the other. The grieved partner will immediately confront the other partner in pursuit of forgiveness and to peacefully reconcile with them.

5. Delayed confrontations

The grieved partner will show through their actions and reactions that something is wrong. The other partner will feel it, try to find the reason and seek to reconcile with their partner.

6. The honeymooners

The grieved partner will trigger a visit to the honeymoon stage. Once at their happiest, matters will be raised in pursuit of reconciliation and to lengthen the honeymoon stage.

7. The “Chesters”

Both partners have unresolved issues with each other. An incident triggers one partner to explode on the other which triggers the other partner to also explode back. Both partners go into some type of separation to think things through and then they reconcile eventually.

Conflicts are better resolved when partners understand the value of the relationship other than that pride is very costly.

It is foolish of partners to leave matters unaddressed for more than a day. Underlying bitterness delays one's overall prosperity. The goal is for partners to be able to reconcile matters promptly.

You can't be sorry and defensive at the same time. Account and sincerely apologize.

The sooner you master the art of resolving matters quicker and effectively, the happier your relationship experience will be. Reconciliation has a fragrance of eternity.

Type of apologies:

1. Brush-offs

Insincere apologies given by the guilty party to just brush off matters. They are not really sorry about what they have done to the other person. The emotions are even faked. Guilty parties tend to emotionally manipulate the grieved parties to forgive them.

2. Sincere apologies

When the guilty party realizes the harm they have done to the other both intentionally and unintentionally, they seek to reconcile with the grieved party. They show through gestures that they are remorseful about their words, actions and are also willing to compensate for the damages incurred as a result of their behaviour.

3. Blame-shifting

The guilty party will state that their response was as a result of being provoked by the grieved party. The guilty party takes no form of accountability and requires the grieved party to apologize first. In some cases the guilty party is sociopathic with their response to the behaviour of the grieved party and sees no need to apologize.

Real and sincere apologies must be free of excuses and reasons. When egos come to play, relationships suffer and the progress is halted until humility finds its way in our hearts.

Talk to each other like people who are in love with each other.

You can be right logically as a man and still be wrong emotionally to a woman and you can be right emotionally as a woman and still be logically wrong to a man.

Effective communication in a relationship is when a man can listen to a woman's emotions with a willingness to understand and when a woman can listen to a man's logic with a willingness to understand and then reach mutually benefiting conclusions together.

It's the willingness to listen, understand and respond wisely, kindly, with sensitivity, thoughtfulness, truthfulness, respectfulness, encouragement and helpfulness that restores relationship. Apologize, reassure and affirm each other.

Partnership

At some point, it is difficult for the mind and one's heart to agree and so often the mind wins. In a relationship one partner is the mind and the other is the heart thus the above identities are interchangeable depending on what the situation or circumstance requires.

When one partner speaks what he/she thinks, the other usually feels, convicts and acts upon what is suggested. Finding harmony between the one who is the mind and the other who is the heart is called "Friendship".

When two soldiers enter a building, they protect each other's vertebral column (spinal cord). The idea is that in order for them to shoot enemies on both sides, they must be joined on both their backs. You and your partner can overcome the challenges you individually face provided you become each other's support. Knowing that your partner has your back gives you additional courage and confidence to overcome whatever may come your way.

To have each other's back means you are going to be vulnerable to each other in most aspects. Vulnerability also means that you are going to have to take your shades off. You don't pretend to be strong when you are not. You don't pretend to have it all together when everything is actually falling apart.

Developing such friendship takes time, communication and character. The best, deepest and everlasting friendships are developed when we learn to cover up each other's nudity. It is at that very moment you realize that your partner has every right within themselves to expose, ridicule and leave you but he/she doesn't at all.

The blunder with many relationships is that this depth is ignored and overlooked while those that pursue it with the same mindset of heart, find it waiting for them. This depth allows your partner to correct you when you are wrong and to teach you when you don't know. It has nothing to do with gender stereotypes but divine love in deep partnership.

If you aren't growing together, you are dying together. What kind of value are you adding into each other daily?

Equipping the potential in your partner

A husband hunts and kills a springbok. His wife cooks the meat for her family. Both the husband and wife possess complementary skills but it must not end there. In their unity, one language and teamwork, they can manage to feed the family continuously.

A wise husband will teach his wife how to hunt and kill the springbok. A wise wife will also teach his husband how to cook the meat. Why? Should it happen that one of them gets sick or passes on, the family will still eat.

Since the husband is a hunter and the wife is a cook. They decide to open a butchery and a kitchen. The husband hires more hunters and the wife hires more cooks. Still, they are united, talk one language and teamwork is inevitable. When one of them falls sick, the one that is healthy can supervise both businesses because he/she knows how to hunt and cook.

Now imagine if such teamwork and partnership is passed down to their children? Isn't that an empire started by two lovers?

The reality of suffering

It is however foolish for a man to lower himself to the poor emotional intelligence and foolishness of his female partner. To be the bigger and wiser person evidently means that you are going to incur pain and heartache.

The foolishness and wickedness you avoided in a partner through your criteria is likely to manifest in portions that you can handle in a particular season of your relationship together.

You are in love with an imperfect person and you are going to suffer. Women tend to be unreasonable, moody, impulsive, selfish, impatient and etc. It will be then that you realise that a woman is best compared to a rose, thorny below and beautiful at the top. Loving men cuts deep. Ask Jesus Christ if you do not believe me!

The wickedness, foolishness and weakness of your partner will cause pain and suffering right after the stages of impressions have passed. Loving imperfect people hurts. It is common sense to select a partner whom you are likely to experience less suffering from but that's not a reality for many although for a moment it seems like love chooses the worst on our behalf then somehow links our hearts together and deems that very imperfect person worthy of being loved by you.

In a nutshell, men are troublesome. Blessed is the man who does not desire a companion nevertheless you are going to be to her what she is going to be less to you and sometimes she will withhold the respect that is due to you as a man. Whether God gives you her or you choose her for yourself, suffering is universal. Many partners try to avoid the suffering in love by moving to new relationships as soon as the honeymoon phase ends - a coping mechanism of some sort. Lust fleets out but love is gradual. You learn every day how to love, overlook faults and to give the goodness of your heart to the very person you have deemed worthy of that very love.

The two heads of a man

When you meet a woman and the first thing she stimulates in her conversation with you is your erection, that my brother is your temptation and distraction not your destiny helper. Your best life is not in selecting a woman you can work life with but rather in selecting a woman you can work life with and also work her body to both your satisfaction.

As a man you must properly examine her beyond the responses of your erection otherwise yours my friend is a miserable life.

The head on top is your best tool to critically analyse her character from the outputs of her continuous initiations and responses. Does her being expressed through her character makes sense to your life's work, aspirations, family ideals and life perspectives?

The head below is definitely a reproductive and pleasurable tool. The mind of this guy is centred on pleasurable releases of bodily chemicals, this guy sees women as desirable hosts. The mind of the penis uses lust as a motivation to identify sexual parts in the feminine structure of a woman that arouse sexual interest in her. Let me not sound like your life science teacher.

As a man you must bring graceful consolidation to both your heads by employing self-control otherwise there are many thighs that are ready to receive you. Off course with varying consequences.

Intentions vs nature

At the start of a relationship. Both parties have good intentions. What stands in the way of fulfilling good intentions is the untransformed nature of both individuals. Of course transformation requires patience and constant application in the chosen wisdom.

A man may intend to be faithful to his wife but secretly battles with his unfaithful nature and often finds himself in different thighs. Even the great Apostle Paul noted the constant battle we all have with our sinful nature. There is just not a person who is not struggling with sin anywhere. Part of human nature is hiding that very struggle even from your partner because you want to be ideal for him/her. Even the sins that is between you and God tend to be exposed to whoever you intend to spend your life with unless otherwise you have a credible confidante that is not your partner then you are safe.

You find a preacher who is a descendant of a serial polygamist, struggling with being faithful to his wife. On the very first day he met his wife, he promised himself to be faithful and also promised her on their wedding day. He communicated his intentions clearly but constantly falls short in carrying them out privately.

The untransformed nature of a man is sabotageous enough to make a man go against his promises and his good intentions. Many men get away with public facades while are they are private failures.

It is proper to have good intentions but again it is important to understand that you are going to gracefully battle with your nature to maintain and to fulfil those very good intentions of yours.

In-denial polygamists

Many men are in-denial polygamists. The catastrophe of cheating as defined in the monogamy spectrum is a clear sign that many men are in-denial polygamists.

Women everywhere wake up to the realisation of their husbands being polygamists as a lot that has been happening under their own nose tends to be revealed by time.

Men in most cases hide their polygamous intentions for the fear that they may not be accepted either by society and the women they are interested in. Now, that alone is a dishonest approach to relationship altogether.

All men are purposed differently and polygamy is not wrong. There is historic evidence to fully back polygamy. Polygamy itself is a purpose and a full-time job. Like any other job or purpose, results will vary.

Relationship beliefs

Relationships founded on uneven beliefs don't last long. Worse is when partners lose the core beliefs of their relationship because of external influences.

Some relationships are built on a few aspects of relationship. Proactive partners tend to discover new beliefs as they age gracefully together.

Your upbringing and other societal influences have a tremendous influence on what you believe a relationship is. Your relationship beliefs will directly affect the overall being of your relationship.

One partner believes that money isn't a major concern in their relationship while the other believes it is. This relationship is already in conflict. Conflict breeds weakness and weakness is an opportunity for opportunists. The solution to this isn't a break-up to say but rather a team effort, to bring ideas on how money can be generated from the opportunities, skills and knowledge both partners have. Conflict at times, presents an opportunity for love in partnership to strive. An inflexible partner is a stumbling block for partnership.

Partners that are ready to build long-lasting relationship tend to consolidate their relationship beliefs in pursuit to build a universal and simple approach to the love they both need and want. It takes a level of maturity to establish sensible relationship beliefs as partners.

Loving enough to let go

Nobody can disappoint you any more than your own expectations in others. Forever with them seemed like it would never come to an end. When the bonds are deep, the departing and un-bonding is never easy.

Everyone is given to you for a specific time and for a particular purpose. Allow people to come into your life and allow people to exit your life...The incoming and the outgoing creates a balance you will soon understand, marvel at your foolishness and receive emancipation from attachment for good. Quick healing isn't healing at all.

To betray trust of a broken friendship or relationship is unwise nor is it the best revenge for the hurt they have caused to you .It is said that, "We meet to part and we part to meet". Be careful not to become the very evil you forgive and have forgiven in others. Envision the worst others can do to you. You also are capable of doing that to them.

Before you enter into a relationship. Get yourself ready to live without that person. Whether they leave you or pass on. Your destiny isn't tied to nobody but God.

Whoever you dearly love is entitled to leave you anyway. Familiarize yourself with that ideal.

Understand that your partner is a part of your life and not necessarily your whole life. Making someone your "Everything" will leave you broken, miserable, suicidal and obsessed.

Conflict of interest

Any day in the world , you may meet a potential somebody that you are likely interested in. You may be interested in them as a potential partner and they may be interested in you as a friend. It is when you realize that both your interests are in conflict. Do you then do away with each other because you want different things or do you consolidate both your interests into a build-up towards a relationship by first becoming friends?

You must never agree to a consolidation in your conflict of interest if you don't understand the cost to your patience and desire that is actually involved.

The nightmare comes when you're interested in somebody becoming your partner while they simply want a one night stand. Right after you have intercourse with them after you've had the illusion of forever together, certain voids begin to emerge then you blame yourself for not seeing through the person at first.

Desperation and obsession are costly factors worth your total avoidance. Learn to let go. Rather lose the person to save yourself than to save the uninterested person over your overall wellbeing.

Cycles repeated, are cycles embraced!

Young and in-love
With untamed desire
So are appetites
Born to one's unveiling fate.

Attractions grab attention
To sweet dawn guilt
Of violated purities.
Perishable youth it is!

The endless elderly cautions
Deemed hateful
And envious as our
Stubbornness prevails
To greater misery.

The world's delicacies
In both men and women
Tempting and distracting
Are these fair creatures
That angels couldn't

Resist.

Wake me up to the satisfactory
Departure of a night
Spent exchanging chemicals
And souls.

Young and naive.
Foolish and impatient.
Charming and cowardly.
Perishable youth it is!

Conceiving children
In lovelessness,
A contrasting reality
The little futures
Are born into.
A problem recreated
Again.

Single in the life-changing
Outcomes
But dual in the pleasurable

Inputs.

Is this justified in
The making of Bitter women?

Born illegitimate yet we Continue to bore
Illegitimates.

Is such foolishness
Worth being commended?
"It's a generational thing",
You say.
"You got it here", you say.
Wasn't being called
A bastard enough
For you to end the Trend in your lineage?

Do better youngster!

INSPIRING QUOTES

"If a guy calls you hot, he is looking at your body. If a guy calls you pretty, he is looking at your face. If a guy calls you beautiful, he is looking at your heart but all three of them still want to sleep with you". – Krizia

"Getting married for sex is the same as getting a cow for a liter of milk". – Thomas Carlyle

"Men talk in straight lines. Women talk in circles. Men rationalize talk. Women emotionalize talk. Men base talk on facts and women base talk on feelings".- Bishop Dununu Msibi

"A good wife is one who serves her husband in the morning like a mother does, loves him in the day like a sister does and pleases him like a prostitute in the night". – Chanakya

"Feelings are indicators, not dictators. They can indicate where your heart is in the moment, but that doesn't mean they have the right to dictate your behaviour and boss you around. You are more than the sum total of your feelings and perfectly capable of that little gift . . . called Self-control.” – Lysa TerKeurst

"Marrying the "right" person doesn't exempt you from hardships. Nor does having hardships mean you didn't marry the right person". - K Collins

*"Love is a partnership of two unique people who bring out the very best in each other, and who know that even though they are wonderful as individuals, they are even better together".
– Barbara Cage*

"The extent to which two people in a relationship can bring up and resolve issues is a critical marker of the soundness of a relationship".– Unknown

"Love is an endless act of forgiveness. Forgiveness is me giving up the right to hurt you for hurting me." — Beyoncé

*"Assumptions are the termites of relationships."
— Henry Winkler*

“We've got this gift of love, but love is like a precious plant. You can't just accept it and leave it in the cupboard or just think it's going to get on by itself. You've got to keep watering it. You've got to really look after it and nurture it.”
— John Lennon

“A loving relationship is one in which the loved one is free to be himself — to laugh with me, but never at me; to cry with me, but never because of me; to love life, to love himself, to love being loved. Such a relationship is based upon freedom and can never grow in a jealous heart.”
— Leo F. Buscaglia

“You open your heart knowing that there's a chance it may be broken one day and in opening your heart, you experience a love and joy that you never dreamed possible. You find that being vulnerable is the only way to allow your heart to feel true pleasure that's so real it scares you.”
— Bob Marley

“Affection is when you see someone's strengths; love is when you accept someone's flaws.”
— One Day #RelationshipGoals

“The most painful thing is losing yourself in the process of loving someone too much, and forgetting that you are special too.”
— Ernest Hemingway

“When you take care of yourself, you’re a better person for others. When you feel good about yourself, you treat others better.” — Solange

“When love is real. You both will do whatever you can to build and construct a solid relationship. It will be hard work but it's possible, We all come with pros and cons. If it's real, it will never be over”.-Katherine Vargas

“Real love - for a president, for a person, for a country — is more textured than that. Real love is about fighting for something long after its flaws are laid bare. It’s about caring so deeply, you have no choice but to place another’s well-being above your own. Love is not a feeling. It transcends feelings. Love is what allows us to be disillusioned and to somehow still believe”.-David Litt “Too many relationships and marriages were working because they had parties to go to, weddings to attend, vacations to splurge on, other couples to compete with and people to impress. But now these couples have to sit in front of each other in a world that's ending and rebirthing as something entirely different, and they're realising, that when all those factors are taken away, the person in front of them is someone they don't even like. Friedrich Nietzsche once said, "Invisible threads are the strongest ties" and couples today are comprehending, that they don't have those threads. They only had the visible ones”. - C. JoyBell C.

“The lover is only a lover; however, the sober, beautiful, and wise choice is the best life-mate, who holds the friendship, love, sex, and all responsibilities to fulfill; it is the gift, fruit, and the truth of the real LOVE”. - Ehsan Sehgal

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Total gratitude and honour is due to God Almighty who ceases not to enlighten us in matters concerning our lives. It is totally by His gracious loving-kindness and favour that such a project has come to pass through my hands. I am indeed humbled.

I am grateful to the various doctors, specialists, nurses, cleaners, porters and security guards both from Midmed Hospital and Netcare Hospital Pretoria for your dedicated service to the preservations of my young life. May God Almighty extend a double portion of the very goodness you poured to Him through my life.

I am also grateful to Nico and Charlotte at Red Spiral for their accurate advice, professionalism and love towards me from the very first day their company started producing my many titles.

The unconditionally support from my family, friends, brothers and sisters in the faith and mostly you the reader as a pursuer of truth and wisdom. Thank you so much and my God Almighty abundantly bless you.

Dear reader

I am filled with so much joy after enduring the pain that comes with sacrifice from such selfishness.

May you be enlightened and have worthwhile love experiences.

Thank you...

50 book titles archived by Njabulo Chriswell Sithole:

1. Umjolo Masimba
2. 21 tryannical laws
3. The darksides of men
4. The darksides of women
5. Leave no stone unturned
6. Words left unsaid (volume)
 - Confessions of a bachelor
 - The car spoke and I listened
 - Enlightened sayings
 - Little lessons
 - What the chief taught the village
 - 7 wise words
7. 300 sayings
8. The power book (volume)
 - There is a righteous here today.
 - Adam where are you?
 - A pilgrim's guide to tertiary.
 - You, your companions and your destiny. -
 - Beyond the badge.

- Character exposed to conquered challenges.
 - Insightful sayings
 - God's case against the church today.
 - Beyond the title.
 - Vision, value.
 - The art of impactful speaking.
 - Behind the scenes.
 - Beyond the brave, is benevolence.
 - I.C.U 4 U
 - Excitement management
 - Beneath the surface.
 - As the grass withers, the farmers searches for his matches.
 - The few good people you will soon know.
 - The fatherless child weeps no more.
 - When the well of love is full but no dares to drink from it.
 - The restored lady's worth.
 - Bent but not broken.
 - Motivational stories.
9. The watered whispers of wonder
10. The fall of godly leaders

11. When the ice boy becomes the master
12. A godly lifetime together
13. After the fire , the best remained
14. How great can you be?
15. Leading my peers
16. 20 laws of dying in power
17. Miscarried love
18. Hidden life lessons
19. Revealing God Almighty
20. Your faith walk with God
21. 31 Midday thoughts
22. Healing is gradual
23. Ejaculations and orgasms aren't enough